can farmers. Napoleon Bonaparte, chewing the bitter end of reflection upon the horrors of the disastrous winter campaign in Russia, when his soldiers perished by thousands for lack of warm clothing, is said to have exclaimed: "Spain has twenty-five millions of Merino sheep. I wish that France had a hundred million!" If France had had a hundred million sheep, the story of that terrible retreat from Moscow need never have

The United States has about fifty seven million sheep. I wish we had three times fifty-seven million sheep. Then we should be independent of foreign supply; then we should have enough wool to clothe our population of one hundred million; then we should have three times the present supply of mutton, which would go far towards solving the troublesome problem of high cost of food supplies. I would like to see adequate pro tection for wool positively assured for the next ten years. Then we should see an enormous increase in the growing of sheep for wool and mutton. Then the millions of acres of abandoned farms in the eastern states would come into profitable use once more, this time as grazing
